Fire claims Burley woman

Cigarette may have ignited hair spray, investigators say

By Ruth Streeter Times News writer

"BURLEY - A Burley wo-man died in her home Tues-day, apparently, from a dead-ly mix of elements that caused a explosion and set fire to her home.

Blanche Lamar-Carr, 84, died within minutes from smoke inhalation, Cassia County Coroner Paul Young said. She sustained mino burns from the fire, Young said.

The Cassia County Sheriff's

Few debates in the long presidential campaign season are as intense as the ones leading up to the debates themselves. Even people in chicken outfits get into the act. A flock of cost under fowl tailed Texas Gov. George W. Bush's father, President Bush, around the country in 1992 until he agreed to debate Bill Clinton.

The pre-debate debate is in full cry again now, with Al Gore accepting invitations by the dozen, Bush languidly concluding "three is plenty" and both sides bidding for public relations advantage from the mere process

The Gore campaign accused Bush of shopping around for a format that fewer people would watch, like the Sunday morning talk shows. "It is unprecedented in modern times for a major party candidate to try to stiff the prime-time commission debates," charged Gora, a more experienced debater. The Bush campaign pointed out that President Clinton and Bob Dole only had two debates in 1990 despite the commission's recommendation for three.

Report: Short circuit sparked TWA crash

WASHINGTON – The center fuel tank explosion that tore TWA Flight 800 apart and hurled into the sea probably was ignited by a short circuit somewhere clase in the plane that transferred excess voltage into the tank, federal officials said Tuesday. Although the blast and crash off Long island on July 17, 1996, destroyed most of the direct evidence of exactly what happened, there is plenty of circumstantial evidence that such a short circuit occurred, National Transportation Safety Board officials said.

After four years of painstaking investigation, board experts have ruled out the possibility – still promulgated by some – that a bomb or a missile caused the crash that killed all 230 aboard the Paris-bound Boeing 747.

Two days of hearings on the crash will conclude Wednesday with the board's official conclu-sions about what caused the crash. There seemed little doubt Tuesday what those conclusions will be.

crash. There seemed little doubt Tuesday what those conclusions will be.

Bernard S. Loeb, director of the agency's Office of Aviation Safety, told an audience of aviation industry, representatives, news reporters and relatives of those who died in the crash that the agency's investigation "leads to the inescapable conclusion that the cause of the in-flight breakup of Flight 800 was a lucklair explosion inside the center tank."

Loeb said that exhaustive research and testing have ruled out a number of possible iguition sources, including lightning, static electricity and radiation from equipment like radar, cell phones and laptop computers.

The suit has attracted wide backing in communities surrounding the compound. More than 1,000 people, for example, tumed out to protest against recent Aryan Nations parades in the streets of Coeur d'Alene, and demonstrators on both sides and demonstrators on both sides and the issue are expected to gather near the courthouse when the trial opens.

The case has attracted popular sympathy in part because Keenan and her son are locals. They said they were driving by the compound one evening when Keenan's son accidentally tosed his wallet out the window. Just as they were circling back to look for it, their old Datsun backfired, apparently feading Aryan guidts to belie e a shot had been fired.

Last month, as about 100 Aryan Nations members and their families gathered in Hayden Lake for what might be the group's last annual World Congress, there was widespride belief that Southern Poverry Isw Center attorney Morris Dessylt. and his group are using the high-profile lawsuits to attract dolations.

Terrorism network eclipses state sponsors

WASHINGTON (AP) - The terror network headed by multimillionaire Saudi-born fugitive Osama bin Laden is steadily eclipsing Iran and other Middle East countries in sponsoring terrorist attacks, Congress' research arm reports.

Major factions in Iran are trying to change the country's image, and Sudan and Libya appear to have reduced sharply their support of international terrorism, the report said. No major terror attacks have been linked to Iran since Mohammad Khatami became president two years ago, but he and hard-line Iranian leaders have helped terrorist groups opposed to peace between Israel and the Arabs, according to the report prepared by Kenneth Katzman, a Middle

t specialist for the igressional Research

Congressional Research Service.
Meanwhile, Bin Laden's Alguida network, believed based in Afghanistan, has evolved in the last five years from a regional threat to U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf to a global threat to Americans and U.S. security interests, the report said.

But the CEOs say that government programs are still needed to help welfare recipients get jobs, clting child care and transportation as the "biggest obstacles to work."

The report recommends Congress increase tax credits and child-care grants to cover more working parents and also subsidize transportation and housing costs.

The 1996 welfare law encouraged recipients to enter the work force by placing a time limit on benefits, allowing more recipients to work while still receiving benefits and offering incentives to employers to hire welfare recipients.

Report: Ice cap disappears at North Pole

You can no longer take a dog sled to the North Pole, unless it's aboard a boat.

According to recent reports, what has always seemed like a rock-solid foundation of ica affoat at the pole has disappeared, at least temporarily. A recent visit by a Russian ice-breaker found the pole surrounded by open water, not ice.

But that doesn't mean the North Pole has melled.

Instead, "this is what is called a polyna, a fissure in the pack ice. These are known to exist including at the North Pole," said George Kukla, a paleo-climatologist at Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Earth Observatory.

The report of an ice-free area at the North Pole raised concerns about global warming, feeding into fears that massive climate change is occurring. Recent reports have also shown the ice cap becoming thinner and shrinking around its edges. But such changes may not be unsual, and changes in temperature may not be responsible.

"When you look at sea ice, it's not just temperature that gov-erns what it's doing," said arctic climate specialist Mark Serreze at the University of Colorado.

Gore counters Bush on military strength

MLWAUKEE (AP) – Al Gore told veterans Tuesday that – America's fighting forces are the strongest and the best in the entire world," defending the nation's defense a day after George W. Bush contended the military was in decline.

Gore, wearing his Veterans of Foreign Wars hat, told more than 7,000 members, "I love this country and I will make sure our military continues to be the best-rained, best-edighting force in the world."

The vice president told the crowd he had served on the House Intelligence Committee and on the Senate Armed Services Committee. He noted that he crossed party lines in the Senate to vote in favor of fighting the Persian Gull War.

"My own experiences gave me strong beliefs about America's obligation to keep our national defenses strong," Gore said.

His $127 billion in military proposals include higher pay, equipment modernization and more money for veterans hospitals.

Bush favorably in the Gallup poll.

Gore was rated stronger than Bush on health care, Social Security, education, abortion rights, prescription drugs, and campaign finance reform in the Gallup poll. Bush led on national defense and they were about even on foreign affairs and guns.

All three polls gave Gore improved marks on the quality of leadership, which had been a solid-Bush advantage for months. Gore was seen as having strong leadership qualities by just more than six in 10, up from 55 percent in the Gallup poll in July, Bush was seen as a strong leader by almost seven in 10, about the same as in July before the Republican convention.

Bush stumbles trying to explain tax proposal

The Washington Post

PEORIA, Ill. — After five months in firm command of the presidential race, Texas Gov. George W. Bush suddenly finds himself on the defensive, behind in polls and struggling to fend off attacks on his pollcies.

Tuesday, Bush acknowledged that he might not have explained his signature proposal for $1.6 li) in tax cut well enough, and cited that as a reason why the plan has not proved popular in polls. But when he tried to explain it in detail, an aide later had to clarify what he had sall explain as not proved popular in a polls. Bush was responding to criticism of the tax-cut plan by Vice President Al Gore, who has pulled even or ahead in several polls taken since the Democratic convention ended Thursday, and has begun to offer focused, daily descriptions of what he consider to be the flaws in Bush's plans.

Throughout the spring and summer, Bush had drawn October-sized crowds for his sunny stump speeches, seeming to profit from a campaign style that has often been described profit from a campaign style that has often been described sleisurely. Now, with Gore back in the hunt, Bush is facing his biggest test since Arizona Sen. John McCain round-housed him in the New Hampshire primary last February.

Sore's shift to the right on morality could be risky

By Thomas B. Edeali The Washington Poet

LOS ANGELES - Vice President Gore has sent a strong nessage that he intends to challenge George W. Bush for Republican-leaning "moral values" voters through his selection of Sen. Joseph Lieberman, Dodina, his support for blocking a fondraiser at the Playboy Mansion and his efforts to separate himself from President Cityton.

This strategy involves risks, eccording to partisans on both sides.

A second, more subtle, problem is the threat that a hard-line moral stance poses to the carefully-murtured Democratic support built up over three decades among millions of voters who fall outside the scope of the traditional nuclear family-single mothers, gbys, the divorced. Many of these voters stress tolerance over judgmental politics.

ghys, the divorced Many of these opters aress tolerance over judgmental politics.

One of the major Democratic gains under Clinton has been to find ways to mesh winning camping strategies with a continued commitment to social liberalism. Steadily changing attitudes about sex, marriage, family, divorce, homosexuality and gender, as the women's rights movement and sexual revolution of the 1960s have become institutionalized in society, have been crucial to the success of Democrats in this once highly thoublesome arena of politics. In 1996, the Clinton campaign found that one of the best predicts of whether a voter was likely to vote for Clinton or Republican Bob Dole was the voter's response to five questions, all directly related to the sexual revolution: Do you believe homosexuality is morally wrong? Do you ever personally look at pornography? Is religion very important in your life? Would you look down on someone who had an affait while they were married? Do you believe sex before marriage in morally wrong?

"Respondents who gave liberal of — in the case of religion, secucases were very likely Pole vot-ers. Along similar lines, voters who are single or divorced are far more likely to be Democrats than those who are married, and those who rarely go to church are more likely to be Democrats than regu-lar churchigoers.

Steadily changing attitudes about society have been crucial to the success of Democrats in this once highly troublesome arena of politics.

Gore has not shown the same instinctive knack as Clinton to appeal to voters along these divisions shaped by religion and articles about the sexual revolution. And the scandal ordinates affall with Monica Lewinsky has severely compromised Gore's ability to capitalize on Clinton's success.

"We were in the midst of a transformation on the issues of the sexual revolution that Clinton's problems put on hold, a transformation of trying to deal with family, moral values and changing sexual mores that Clinton himself had set off," a Democratic strategist said. "Lewinsky was a major setback to the Democratic strategist said. "Lewinsky was a major setback to the Democratic strategist said. "Lewinsky was a major setback to the Democratic constituency inclined toward liberal stands on sexual issues and the need to separate himself from the Clinton sex scandal.

The conflicting pressures on Gore resulted in the spectacle of Democratic Party officials, acting with the full approval of the Gorampaign, successfully but on Gorampaign, success tundraiser at the Playboy Mansion.

"I am sorely disappointed by the congressyoman's decision to proceed with her Playboy fundraiser. We have done everything we can and now we have no alternative but to take action. Loretta Sanchez will not be speaking at the Democratic National Convention next week," Democratic National Fohisman Joe Andrew said before Sanchez agreed to move the fundraiser.

The party's core base of support among social liberals has, in turn, been shaken by Gore's selection of Lieberman, a politician known for his harsh moral criticism of Clinton and for his repeated denunciation of sex and violence in the astraction.

violence in industry.
"The Democrats are in as much danger as the Republicans were in saying "we are not mean anymore" of allenating Christian conservatives and hard-liners. By the same token, Democrats run the risk of allenating real liberals," said Andrew Kohut, of the nonpartisan Pew Research Center, adding his belief that the losses are not likely to be high.

This view is by no means unanimous. "This isn't the Democratic Party I grew up with," said John Burton, president of the California state Senate, responding to the Playboy controversy. "It smacks more of fascism than the Democratic Party. What are they going to do next, burn books?"

In a column headlined "As they going to do next, burn books?"

In a column headlined "As Bubba the Clown Departs, the Hour of the Prig Descends," essayist Ron Rosenbaum wrote-that "the idiot virtue-crats running AI Gorés convention" initiated "a stupid and brutal campaign that ultimately succeeded in browbeating Representative Sanchez into submission."

James Petersen, co-author of "The Century of Sex Playboy's History of the Sexual Revolution" and a writer for the magazine, was even more outspecten: "The Democrats have enjoyed the hormonal rush being the liberals of the last century. To borrow a page from Daybook strikes me as suicide. ... The sexual revolucion was put to a tote in the impacchiwas put to a vote in the impeach-ment and the sexual revolution Conversely, David Smith, spokesman for the Human Rights Campaign Fund, gave the Gore campaign a pass: "They are exercising discipline in their messag-

This is the most incusive par-form yet."

Pollster Stan Greenberg, an adviser to the Gore campaign and key strategist in Clinton's 1992 bid, said the Playboy Mansion controversy and the tensions over Lieberman's harsh critique of the entertainment industry are a part of a long term political and social accommodation to the changes in the workplace, the role of women and in personal behavior wrought by a movement begun in the 1960s.

"If you look at the period from the '60s, the Democrats came down on side of individual liberty and in that earlier period the party was associated with the excesses, and the Republicans were able to ride their opposition to the sexual revolution to a national majority," Greenberg said.

national majority," Greenberg said.

In more recent years, he said, "the public has made an accom-modation to the sexual revolu-tion," and "the Democrats are much closer to where the public is."

For a variety of reasons - some deserved and some not - skateboarders in Twin Falls are not particularly popular. Wishing skateboarders would go away is one thing, but until they have a place to go, skateboarders in Twin Falls will be in the public eye. That's why the community should support an effort to build a skate park in Harmon Park. The city has already pledged $90,000 toward construction, but only if supporters can rustle up $97,000 in cash and in kind contributions such as materials, equipment

materials, equipment

materials, equipment and labor.

So far, supporters have raised about two-thirds of what's needed, but they're still roughly $30,000 short. The clock is ticking, because the ciry's offer applies to the current budget year, which expires Sept. 30. After that, it's unclear if the offer will stand. For some residents, the concept of the ciry underwriting a skate park is repellent. They view any public support for skateboarders as capitulation to hoodlums.

Through word and deed, some local skateboarders have brought much of this ill will this upon themselves. Too many residents have had unpleasant encounters with skaters who commandeer public sidewalks and parking lots. In too many cases, these affronts to public safety quickly evolve into affronts to public vicility.

The most celebrated incident occurred Feb. 16 at the Lynnwood Shopping Center, when security guard

Hagerman did right with recall
Hagerman residents: Good job! Who knew (besides the Census Bureau) that Hagerman had so many individuals? I know you wouldn't have been able to tell what a little metropols! Hagerman is looking at the previous School Board election numbers.

The numbers from the recall show a town pretty much divided. In no way, shape, or form was it a blowout vietry for the School Board As for the Verry vocal minority," who knew so few would turn out to be so many?

If we all only learn one lesson from this, I hope it is that we must get involved and stay involved with any-hing that affects our children. At the next School Board meeting and all the meetings thereafter, I hope that all seats are taken and it's standing room only! I would like for anybody who pays taxes, has children, grandids, nieces, or nephews in Hagerman School to be at these meetings and participate, supple to choose from instead of the same ones.

The children are our greatest ple to choose from insteau or us some ones.

The children are our greatest resource. The School Board exists because there is a school; the school Board, school and teachers would not exist sheet on the children.

Last of all, I would like to encourage every parent to get involved with their child's education. Do not assume that the school will do what's best for your child. Only the parent really knows what's best for his or her child. Be your child's or children's advocate. Someday they will thank you for it!

BRENDA VINCENT

Hagerman did right with recall

Gene Turley (who is also the county's part-time coroner) wound up in a swearing, spitting and slapping tussle with a 17-year-old skater. Public sentiment ran strongly in favor of Turley, who was perceived as having struck a blow against sneering, slovenly and disrespectful youth.

who was perceived as having stack's blow against seneering, slovenly and disrespectful youth.

But telling Twin Falls skateboarders to knock it off and go someplace else is simply not a solution. Wherever that someplace else might be, skateboarders may not be welcome there, either.

Always telling them "no" sets the stage for confrontation. It's no wonder that some skateboarders are so easily provoked. The key to solving the problem is to provide a better alternative.

provoked. The key to solving the problem is to provide a better alternative.

While they may not always be well-groomed or tastefully attired, local skaters often present a misleading image. Most of them are good kids, born and raised in the Magic Valley, with fine futures ahead of them. They are our children and grandchildren.

A skateboard park may not be the ciry's top recreational priority, but its backers can argue that it is probably as deserving as the year-round swimming pool the community has created. A skateboard park may not be a "feel good" donation to a freshly scrubbed group of teen-agers. But with a gap of only $30,000 to close, the cost doesn't seem too high.

Ketchum and Hailey have built skate parks. Burley is in the process of doing so. Surely Twin Falls can do likewise.

Did something die in there? What about in front of the Redormed Church on Pole Line Road? Did OM! explode or what? And had I known 15 years ago as I was a teen swimming in Rock Creek that I could get some fundly infection. ABC report riles the organic farm movement ohn Stossel gave us a power-ful journalistic expose of the organic food mythology on ABC's "20/20" in February. Last week, he apologized to viewers for a misstatement

Last week, he apologized to viewers for a misstatement related to his inquiry into organic foods. Newspapers all over the country had published an organic industry charge that Stossel was deceiving the American public. Ironically, the organic press release was distributed by Fenton Communically, the organic press release was distributed by Fenton Communically, the organic press release was distributed by Fenton Communically, the organic press release was distributed by Fenton Communically, the organic press release was the "Alar on apples" hoax that had mothers snatching healthful apples out of their children's lunchboxes for fear of the pesticide. What was Stossel's mistuke? He said ABC had tested organic and mainstream vegetables and had found no pesticide, residue on either. In fact, ABC hadn't tested any vegetables for pesticides. But then, his program wasn't about pesticides; livas about bacterial contamination. As Stossel reminded us, ABC tested mainstream and organic foods to see if organic farmers' use of manure was putting its consumers at greater risk of bacterial infections.

Indeed, ABC found sharply higher levels of dangerous bacteria on the organic spring greens and sprouts than in their mainstream counterparts. Katherine DiMatteo, head of the Organic Trade Association, says the OTA mey sue Stossel for 'damage to the organic industry.'

Her case doesn't look very strong.

Stosset of Gamage to the cross of the case doesn't look very strong. First and foremost, Stossel told the exact truth about finding much more E. coli bacterial-contamination on the organic vegetables. The organic supporters are saying ordinary E. coli is only a little dangerous, and nobody should worry unless they find the more-virtlent 0:157 strain, which can kill even healthy people or leave them with permanent damage to internal organis.

COMMENTARY Dennis T. Avery

But, as Lester Crawford said on the "20/20" segment, health authorities consider any E. coil in food to be a pathogen, a health hazard and an indication of filth and contamination. Crawford is the former head of food safety inspection for the Food and Drug Administration.
DiMattee herself made the statements most damaging to the organic industry. When Stossel asked her if organic foods were more nutritious than regular foods, she said organic was "as nutritious as any other product." What a radical admission, from an industry that had claimed for decades that modern food is a pathid, malhourishing shadow of the "natural" and vigorously healthful organic product.
When Stossel repeated his question, she repeated her answer: "It is as nutritious as any other product on the market." It must be assumed she said this because Crawford was on the program and would have exposed as false the usual organic claims of extra nutrients. He knows many comparative tests of organic and regular food have been done over the decades and have discerned no consistent difference.
So DiMatteo was forced to tell the truth on national television. Now she's demanding ABC destroy all tupes of the program. No wonder. Stossel also asked DiMatteo if organic food was safer. Again, she felt forced to tell the truth. "Organic agriculture is not particularly a food safety claim," she admitted.
Organic means only that the farmers use organic fertilizer and "natural" pesticides such as copper sulfate (broadly toxic) and sulfur (a soil contaminant).

Even Stossel's mistake - saying "our tests surprisingly found no pesticide "residue on the conventional samples of the organic" - would have been accurate if he had simply cited government data. The FDA finds no pesticide residues on about 70 percent of the unwashed vegetables it tests and their market basket survey annually finds we're being exposed to less than 1 percent of the "allowable" amount of pesticide residue, which has safety factors of over a thousandfold built in.

Meanwhile, Bruce Ames, recently awarded the National Science Medal by President Clinton, says 99.9 percent of the pesticides we ingest are natural, produced in the plants to fend off pests. So muchfor organic food being pesticide free. "

The uproar about Stossel's misstated footnote is because organic food is the icon on which the entire environmental movement is based. Without the myth that organic farming gives us more nutrious foods, the average consumer would worry about paying so much more for it. Without the false idea that organic food is safer for people, parents might worry about their children's food being fertilized with pathogen-laden animal manure.

Without the propaganda about pesticides endugnering withlife or the false idea reliable of the soil of the soil of the produced of the pesticides endugnering withlife or the false idea reliable or the soil of the soil of the pesticides endugnering withlife or the false idea reliable or the soil of t fertilized with pathogen-laden animal manure. Without the propaganda about pesticides endangering wildlife, city folks might realize that without high-yield farming, we'd already have plowed down every square mile of forest on the planet to feed ourselves.

The conclusion that must be drawn is the organic and environmental movements want Stossel punished so no other reporters will dare uncover the organic myth.

Guns are not the problem

Guns are not the problem

In regard to Russell L. Foren's letter:
It is not the NRA's fault for the idiot that misuses a gun. Nor is it the gun's fault. A gun cannot load, aim and fire itself. The NRA does not promote gun violence. It advocates the Second Amendment right to bear arms. The NRA and gun manufacturers are not responsible for crimes committed with a gun.
People need to be accountable for their actions and quit placing blame on others.
Your complaint needs to be addressed to the politicians, not the NRA. If criminals knew that severe punishment would be enforced, they might think twice before comfitting an act of violence. Gun control is not the answer. Education and punishment are.

questioned his manhood and neither did my our strack on police officers really galls me. Your straement that guns don't cill, cops do, is pathetic Do you really believe cops sit and wait for idids, old ladies and minorities to walk by then draw their weapons and shoot them? Most officer-involved shootings are warranted. So, before you accuse and make assumptions, find out the facts first. Police officers have, by far, saved more lives than they have taken. My brother-in-law is one of those you accuse of Milling the innocent. He puts his life on the line each day, and he does not deserve your accusations. What he does deserve is respect and a medal of honor! He and all cops have earned that! You obviously are unhappy living in medal of honor! He and an open earned that! You obviously are unhappy living in such a horrible country. I suggest you pack your bags and move to Libya or China. Then let's see what happens when you write a letter such as the one year. May be then you'd appreciate this country and all the men and woinen who fought and died so your constitutional rights would be ensured.

I suggest to you, Mr. Foren, that it is not guns, the NRA, the police officers or the policies of the United States that is the problem. It's people like you that's the problem.

The Basque people cherish their distinguished and violent history

BILBAO, Spain (AP) – They are an ancient people who speak a linguistic enigma. Through the centuries, they've mastered everything from whaling to banking. Their most famous son is a prominent saint.

But the distinguished history of the Basque people includes an undercurrent of separatist violence that has produced Europe's longest-running regional conflict.

This summer has been a terrifying one of bullets and exploding cars: The Basque separatist group ETA has launched a nationwide offensive, making a 14-month truce it halted in December seem like a distant memory. The case-fire ended after a round of stillborn peace talks.

Eleven people have been killed since the cease-fire ended, and since early July alone ETA has staged 14 attacks. But France Minister Jose Maria Aznar, who survived an ETA car bombing 1995, has ruled out Basque independence or any other concessions.

The city's looking to widen the Tom Courtney said.

The intersection is awkward through lanes in each direction on Washington Street.

"That will move a lot more traffic," Buttcane said.
About 20,000 cars go through the intersection each day, said John Watson, project engineer at Anderson said the widening was a factor when he opened a second store on Pole Line Road earlier this year.

Widening the intersection is part of the city's plan to widen Washington Street to Pole Line Road, Courtney said.

The next phase, widening Washington Street from Shoup Avenue to V-I Propane at 435 N. Washington St., could begin in the fall of 2001 or spring of 2002, Watson said. The road will be widened to two lanes each way with a turn lane.

On Aug. 4, the federal government sued the Shovel Brigade for trespassing, claiming it lacked proper permits for the road work. The government also said it planned to close the road.

U.S. Attorney Kathryn Landreth said in a recently filed motion in U.S. District Court that the government, "intends undertake the process... to restrict access to the South Canyon Road and to repair, restore and stabilize the area disturbed by Shovel Brigade on July 3 and 4, 2000."

Steve Myhre, assistant U.S. attorney in Nevada, said in an interview Tuesday that he didn't know what the Forest Service's plans were now.
"I have no comment on that because I'm not an expert on access issues." Myhre said.
Myhre did say that motorized wehicles have been using the opened portion of road to drive into the wilderness. He said motor vehicle traffic poses a threat to the southernmost species of bull trout in the Jarbidge River.

Vehicles are driving back into the wilderness area, not only on the road, but over the river as well. Werdon said in her assessment of the condition of the area. Demar Dahl, Shovel Brigade co-leader and protest organizer, add in a recent interview that he has heard about motorized vehicles being driven into the Jarbidge Wilderness area and into the stream.

contends.

Citing state Department of Ecology figures, Save Our Summers contends 60 percent of the annual fine particle pollution is produced by wheat stuble amoke in the 11 counties where fields are burned.

"Although many growers don't burn in these counties, the wheat stubble that is burned produces 3 times more pollution than woodstoves, 6.5 times more more pollution than all the vehicles, "SOS said in a release.

Wheat growers representatives disputed the contentions.
SOS last fall sued Ecology over a voluntary agreement on the amount of field stubble that wheat growers will burn over the next seven years. The Spokane-based clean air group contends the agreement violates the Americans With Disabilities Act.

The Washington Association of Wheat Growers, an invited participant in settlement talks dropped out of the mediation attempts.

A settlement meeting was scheduled-Wednesday-between-SOS and Ecology representatives. A scheduled Sept. 1 hearing in U.S. District Court could be postponed, Roe Roberts, an Eastern Washington University professor and SOS board chairman, said Tuesday.
"We would prefer to work with Ecology and come up with something which protects public health and allows burning in those areas where it is absolutely necessary," Roberts said.

A majority of the 284 portables in the Davis School District were projects for inmates enrolled in the building and construction program sponsored by the Salt Lake Community College.

Through the construction program at the prison, the school district gets portable classrooms for half the cost of those manufactured in the private sector.

The program began 16 years ago when James E. Miller, associate professor, arrived at the prison to teach construction skills.

It is part of a program that includes automotive, electrical and architectural courses taught to minimum security immates. But institutions keep an eye of factors such as the numbers of high school graduates that might affect their campases, since the enrollment numbers dictate state funding.

Utah Board of Regents numbers forecast growth for Utah's nine public colleges and universities over the next 20 years. Totals are expected to rise from 122,400 students to 138,140 in the next five years.

Dixie, which enrolled about 5,200 students last fall, expects 6,600 to 7,000 students, said apokesman Mark Petersen.

"Enrollment is booming," he said. "We've been on a steady increase for quite a few years now. Since we're so isolated (in southern Utah), I think that's a remarkable growth pattern. "Enrollment at UVSC in-Orem reached 20,000 students last year. Three days before school starts at UVSC, registrars count 15,533 students taking at least one class, an increase of 10.5 percent from this time last year. Students have been turmed away for the last three years due to lack of space. WSU anticipates students from the booming Weber and Davis counties will pick Weber because of its small class sizes. The fire had consumed some 60,000 acres, and had tied up 10 hand crews, 40 engines, five choppers, four fire retardant planes and six bulldazers.

The fire had earlier threatened the Magic Mountain ski area, some ranches and buildings. Buy late Tuesday, it had been contained away from any buildings

Otherwise, the fire could be contained by Thursday.

Montana through an area larger than Connecticut and killed 85 people.

Federal fire experts say it could happen again, this year.

A line of forest fires 20 miles apart or less runs from the Sawtooth Range to the Canadian border. Dozens of communities from Atlanta to Salmon and Hamilton, Mont., lie within one burning period of a major fire, said David Bunnell, the man in charge of large-fire assessment for the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise.

"We have more fire on the landscape than existed in the 1910 fire, and we have more uncontrolled fire line and more perimeter exposed," Bunnell said.

In 1910, 70 mile-per-hour winds blew the fires as far as 50 miles in the 35-hour period from Aug. 20 to Aug. 23 in what was called the Big Blowup.

A similar wind storm burned 200,000 acres in Yellowstone National Park on Aug. 20, 1988, lided Black Saturday.

We are set up for another big event that could happen any time," said Mick Harrington, research fire ecologist at the Forest Service's Rocky Mountain Fire Sciences Laboratory in Missoula, Mont.

The probability that all the factors would line up - winds more than 40 miles per hour for longer than four hours with a relative humidity below 15 percent.

Is less than 10 percent, Bunnell said.

Average weather conditions for the next month would make said.

Average weather conditions for the next month would make this fire season the worst in history for the Northern Rockies, Bunnell said. The 1910 fires burned more than 3 million acres in Idaho and Montana alone, most in the three-day Big Blowup.

Firefighters were burned alive in infernos that raged through steep, forested canyons. Thousands of people in towns like Wallace and Avery were evacuated, and other communities - Taft, Deborgia, Tuscor and Haugan along the St. Joe River were wiped off the map. The 1910 fires left an indelible mark on the lives of all who fought it, including two genera-tions of Forest Service leaders. It prompted them to press for an aggressive fire-suppression poli-cy and led to the development of today's wildland firefighting today's wildland tiretignting structure, managed by the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, a conglomera-tion of federal and state agencies assigned to fight fires.

HILDALE, Utah (AP) - First-year Principal Max Tolman, was pleasantly surprised when 94 students showed up for the first day of classes Monday at Phelps Elementary in Hildale. Last year the school had near ly. 250 students. However, in July the leader of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Sainty, Warren Jeffs, told followers to stop associating with apostates and outsiders and pull their chil-dren from public schools. Most of the families in Hildale and neighboring Colorado City, Ariz, are polygamists and most are members of Jeffs' FLDS sect. Neither Tolman nor Rex

Spiff up stuff with cutouts

Q: How can I decorate with dot

Q: How can I decorate was us-cutous?

A: Does your home have a door, cupboard, bureau or other piece of furniture that could use some pix-zar? Try carving out a few decor-tive dots to give it new personality.

Back in the 1930s and 40s, play-ful patterns of holes often decora-ted otherwise solemn household objects, such as clothing hampers and radiator covers. These pat-terns can be easily and inexpen-sively replicated with an electric drill and a little bit of practice.

MARTHA Martha

Dot cutouts can look sophisticated or cheerful when grouped into geometric motifs such as spirals or clustered into natural forms, such as flowers or leaves. But they can also be useful: A few perforations provide welcome ventilation for a cupboard or closet, or for an armoire holding video or audio equipment. Holes in a set of shutters can let just enough light into a room. And a house number etched into your front door will eleverly show guests the way.

On some surfaces, like the front door, you won't want to bore holes all the way through the wood which would mean easy access for bugs and drafts. But partially bored holes can be just as beautiful.

Her friend Traci Money said, "Dinner at the Shaw house is a treat. She always has music, candles, wine, great food and, of course, a fabulous dessert."

As a child, Shaw lived on a small dairy farm. She grew up cooking "Southern." Her first husband, a military man, helped her travel the world. After he died, she married Tom, a government employee. She and Tom have lived in Hagdrman for more than 20 years, in a house overlooking the valley.

Tom was originally from Pennsylvania, but went to school in Colorado, where hell in love with the West. He is an avid hunter and fisherman who recently retired from the United States Fish and

Time to sample summer's bounty

By Russ Parsons Los Angeles Times

The California summer fruit industry is back in full production after two years of late, spoty harvests caused by erratic spring weather brought by El Nino's heavy rain and its bookend La Nina dry spell. Whether you're talking about peaches, plums and nectarines or strawberries or grapes, all is normal this year. So what are you doing with all that fruit? Here are some ideas:

ideas:

• Peaches, necturines and plums: The trick to buying peaches and nectarines is not to be fooled by the red color on the skin. That doesn't tell you whether the fruit is ripe; it's a varietal characteristic. Look for the background color, which should be golden. If there is a tinge of green, that's probably OK too.

To tell when the fruit is really ready to eat, there is nothing like your sense of smell. Really good peaches, plums and nectarines possess a strong fruity fragrance that you can smell across the kitchen.

If the fruit you buy at the grocery isn't as ripe as it could be, you can improve it by putting it in a paper bag and leaving it ar room temperature. Check it every day, the aroma and the slightly soft flesh will tell you when it's ready.

Once peaches, plums and nectariness are ripe, they'll last a day or two at room temperature. Longer than that and they ought to be refrigerated, though that will diminish their flavor somewhat. Do not wash the fruit before chilling it; the extra moisture will encourage spoilage. Rather, give it a rinse in cold water before serving ite Don't be put off by plums that look dusty - that's called "bloom," and it's a natural yeast dust that actually helps prevent spoilage. Bloom is also a good indication that the plums have not been overly handled.

plums have not been overly handled. Nectarines and plums don't need to be peeled, but peaches should be if you're going to cook them. That's not hard. Cut a shallow X in the blossom end of the fruit and then dunk it in boiling water for five to 30 sectods - the time will depend on the ripeness of the fruit; the riper the peach, the shorter the time. Immediately plunge the fruit into ice water to stop the cooking. The peel should slip right off. If it doesn't, blanch it again for another 10 seconds or 50.

again for anounce of sections of the simplest desserts you can make with peaches, plums and nectarines is a crisp frost the fruit with a little third to sugar and a tablespoon or so of flour and layer it in a shallow baking dish. In a food processor, pulse 1/4 cup butter with 1/4 Please see FRUIT, Page C8

While the ground is nice and warm, plant for a fall harvest. How about some. dill?

Dill sprouts in about two weeks and grows so quickly that pests never seem to notice it's even there. It is a pretty plant that fills in empty places with soft, fernlike leaves that taste great.

Look for "Fernleaf," a dwarf dill that only gets about 18 inches tall. It is slow to go to seed. Pretty in flower arrangements, though. "Dukar" is good in salads and the seeds are good for seasoning. "Superdukar" is tall, with straight stems. Some say it has more essential oil than Dukar "Bouquet" blooms quickly and produces large seedheads that are good for pickling. "Long Island" or "Mammoth" are commonly grown by commercial growers.

leaves close to the stem. If you want seeds, let the flowers form, bloom and go to seed. Out the seedheads when most of the seeds have formed and hang them upside-down in a brown paper bag. The seeds will dry out and drop into the bag. You can keep dill leaves in the refrigerator. Sick the stems in a glass of water and put a plastic bag over the tops. They'll ablo keep for several months layered in pickling salt in a covered jur in the refrigerator. Just wash them off when you need them. Hang bunches of dill upside down to dry them. Store them in a tightly sealed jar away from the light and use within four to six months.

DEAR CATHY: I have three bush conies and one tree peony that never bloom. I trimmed the tree peony this spring and it started to develop buds but they just shriveled up and did not produce a flower. I don't know if I have them planted too deeply or not deeply enough. They don't appear to have a bug problem that I can see. What can I do to get them to bloom? Thanks.

A PEONY LOVER

DEAR LOVER: There are several reasons peonies refuse to bloom. (1) The crown might be buried too deep or too shallow; (2) Immature transplants. Roots that have been divided and transplanted usually fail to flower for at least two years. If the divisions were very small, they might not bloom for five years; (3) Crowding. If the plantings are too crowded, they stop producing; (4) Too much shade; (5) Lack of nutrients. Only you can look at this list and fig-ure out which of these complaints your peonies might have. Good luck to you.

TTP OF THE WEEK. Even if your trees are healthy and pest-free today, tomorrow might be another story. If all the trees on a block, or in a parking lot, park or community are the same, the pest that likes those trees can wipe out an entire neighborhood in no time. Flant for diversity.

DEAR JIM: I have become interested in gardening and land-scaping and I want to install the most effective and efficient watering system for my entire yard. Will commercial drip water-ing systems work?

Jan Dear PAUL For most serious do-it-yourself landscapers, drip ado-it-yourself landscapers, drip awatering is, by far, the most effective and efficient watering system. Standard sprinklers are effective but less efficient because too much water evaporates and is lost into the air before it reaches the plant or ground.

Eates and is lost into the air before it reaches the plant or ground.

Once installed below the ground level, or just under mulch, a drip watering system is hidden from view. People naturally think that gravity will cause the water to flow down even deeper. Actually some does go down, but it also goes upward and outward due to capillary action between the dirt particles. Drip watering systems are simple for the homeowner to install. Most use 14-inch or 12-inch tubing below the ground level. Wherever it passes a plant that needs water, you attach a tiny emitter to the tubing. Emitters are available in various water flow rates and many cost less than a dollar.

are available in various water flow rates and many cost less than a dollar. Using a simple punch that all the manufacturers offer, punch introp holes in the wall of the tub-ing. ries available. Most emitters are color-coded Sories avalantee.

Most emitters are color-coded to indicate the water flow race from them. The typical flow rates are 0.5, 1.0 and 2.0 gallons per flour (gph). As an example, a small young shrub would require one 0.5 gph emitter. A small tree may require four 2.0 gph emitters and a large tree may need up to 10.

For a complete landscapping watering system, add weighted emitters, foggers and micro-sprinklers. If you have hanging plants that often need regular watering, weighted emitters (available in different flow rates) hang down over each pot from small tubes. You can shut off each one individually. vidually.

You can shut off each one individually.
Foggers (sometimes called misters) produce a very fine cloud of moisture at each plant. The water settles down to moisten the soil for the roots and also cools and moistens the foliage. Some plant types require this. Micro-sprinklers, some with adjustable sprays, are often attached to the same system. These are located close to the ground and are ideal for flower gardens can ground-cover. The spray patterns are as small as 4 feet in diameter.

For convenience, add an elec-

New custom screen doors can make your home's entry grand RAVENNA, Ohio - Tina Walters' morning commute is a walk down the path from her house to her woodworking shop. Dressing for success is wearing something the sawdust won't mess up too much. A decade ago, Walters traded in the pressure of a sales career for the soul nourishment of working with wood. She started Touchstone Woodworks, a small company that specializes in custom-made screen and storm doors.

Since then, the company's doors have found their way to 45 states, and Walters is looking to hire another woodworke.
Touchstone Woodworks' doors aren't the utilitarian aluminum doors or flimsy pine versions foul'll find in a typical home center. They're heavy, individually trafted mahogany doors made specifically to fit an entry door mod complement its style.
They're also fairly pricey. Valuers says her customers typically spend $500 to $1,000 for door and the accompanying hardware, and she recommends they

"We fill a very niche market," she says. Her customers tend to be people who love their houses and appreciate craftsmanship.

The doors are built one by one by Walters and employee Charlotte Baumbick. The two work on the ground floor of a small, barn-style building on the densely wooded land where Walters has lived since 1995. The company's other employee, Louetts Mayle, works upstairs in the office.

company's other employee, Louetts Mayle, works upstairs in the office.

The company has a catalog of styles, many embellished with Victorian fretwork. Walters, however, often customizes a door to the customer's preferences and the size and style of the entry. In fact, she encourages customers to send measurements and detailed sketches or photos of their entry doors so she can tailor a screen door to match.

The doors are 11/4 inches thick and made of Honduras mahagany, a wood used in boat building. Walters and Baumbick start with rough-sawn lumber rather than precut boards, which can warp in storage. They build the doors with mortise-and-tenon and his wife is none too happy about having them piled up all over.

Many of us have had this problem. You're flipping through the paper or a favorite magazine when you notice a recipe for lemon thyme potato pancakes. "Hmm, that looks good," you tear out a recipe for tomato basisoup. Then it's shortcut microwave lasagna. Before you know it, you're got a box full of great-sounding recipes. But they might never grace your table because it's easier to serve meat-loaf again than to dig through a disorganized pile of recipes. Reader Winona Rhodes shared her organizational system. She doesn't use specialized recipe software. She has created a recipe folder in Microsoft Word. She started the folder by typing in recipes from the Food Network, then added others that

Let's make bread.
In Kannsas, that's not just an exhortation to good cooking, it's yearcically a civic duty. After all, the state is No. 1 in the United States in wheat production.

Jane Fry of Elk Falls, Kan., has been making bread since her marriage in 1976. Fry's multigrain dinner rolls weng first place in the dinner roll category of this year's Kansas Wheat Commission's recipe contest. Her wheat and oats bread took numer-up in the bread machine category.

Fry said the latter is an old family resisted but now would hate to live without.

400 degrees until the top is brown and the fruit has turned to jam, about 40 minutes.

• Berries: The best strawberries are probably the ones with the darkest color. The popular Camarons should be almost reddish black.

Water is the enemy of all berries, but especially of the socalled "bush berries" – raspberries, blackberries and olallieberries. Their skins are so thin and delicate that water not only encourages spoilage, it will actually suck out juice. In fact, many growers insist that you shouldn't wash berries at all before using them: That may be a littleextreme, but you should certainty limit their bath time to only the briefest of showers.

All berries should be treated as simply as possible. The very best way to serve them is with some sort of cream: either liquit chipped of frozen. Add a little pastry for some texture – even crumbled cookies, such as gingersnaps, are fine – and you've got heaven.

crumbiee cookies, such as gingersnaps, are fine – and you've got heaven.

• Melons: There is no one set rule to buying melons. What applies to cantaloupes is probably not true for honeydews and certainly not for watermelons.

With cantaloupes, look for a good, raised netting on the shell and make sure there is no stem left – cantaloupes "slip" from their vines when they're ripe.

Honeydews are completely smooth, of course, and they are cut from the vines, so there's always a little knob. Look for a uniformly golden creamy color to the find. If you see a honeydew with brown speckles, buy it that's sugar that's bled through the rind. If's usually washed off at supermarkets, but occasionally you'll get lucky.

With both types – and with the various specialty melons you find in the market these days – the set clue to ripeness is a powerful floral aroma at the stem end.
Once again, the nose knows.

With watermelons, you've got another set of indicators entire by Look for a deep green color overall, with a golden spot one side (that shows the watermelon lay in the patch long enough to get sugar). And, of course, there should be a solid satisfying, hollow thump. Surprisingly, some melon prosecommend buying cut watermelons to be really sure. Though other indicators can be iffy, a really sweet watermelon will always have a deep red color.

Melons aren't improved by Melons aren't improved by cooking or even by ornamentation. A slice of cool, fragrant, honeyed melon is perfect in itself. Of course, if you want to wrap that melon in a slice of good prosciutto for an appetizer, we're behind you 100 percent. And if your melons are something less than perfect, or if you just can't resist gilding filles, you can serve sliced melon in a cold sugar syrup (about half as much sugar as water, cooked until clear and then chilled; a sprig of mint gives a nice complexity).

• Grapes: There are two ways Melons aren't improved by perity).

Grapes: There are two ways of looking at most supermarket grapes: You can't say much bad about them; or you can't say much good about them. Actually, both are true. Grapes are almost always sweet and fart. And they almost always taste just the same. Buying green, red or what the trade calls "black" is really a decorating decision. Except for rare instances, gone are the great Muscat and Concord grapes that had strong identities. Most grapes are rather neutral. But they are crisp. And they are sweet.

If you ever find Thompson Seedless (green) grapes that are almost amber in color – as opposed to pale green – you won't believe the difference in taste. That simple sugar turns to honey. Of course, you'll almost never see them. When grapes get that ripe, they have a discouraging tendency to fall of their stems, that's called "shatter," and supermarkets hate it.

Veterans Chris Mims and John Avery, a pair of first-round draft picks, were waived Tuesday as teams moved to solidify their opening day rosters.

Mims, a defensive lineman for the Chicago Bears who was a first-round pick by the San Diese Chargers in 1992, had been injured for most of camp and missed an 11:30 a.m. practice Monday, reportedly because he overslept.

A four-team trade between Detroit, Seattle, New York and the Lakers collapsed Monday night when the Pistons had see ond thoughts, and now it's a question of whether the Knicks will find another way to divorce themselves from Ewing, the franchise cornerstone for the past decade and a half.

"I hope that he does stay, and that he'll be appreciated like he should be," said teammate Alban Houston.

Appreciation, however, was a scarce quantity in some sectors of New York as word of the mammoth trade that fell apart dominated the sports talk scene.

New York was set to get Glen

It remains possible that the Lakers could end up with Laettner. The Dallas Mavericks have offered the Pistons a pack-age that is believed to include Cedric Ceballos and 53 million, and they would be expected to immediately reship Laettner to the Lakers for Rice.

"We made Detroit an offer prior to this that we were surprised they walked away from," Mayericks owner Mark Cuban said. "Our offer is still on the table, but we haven't talked to Detroit for several days." The Pistons did manage to pull off a different deal Tuesday, sending guard Lindsay Hunter to Milwaukee for forward Billy Owens.

Wood River scorer looks to break

By Joe Sunnen Times-News writer

HAILEY - When Wood River coach Brad Daluiso first saw Jason Southward play soccer, it wasn't the lanky freshman's abliry to score goals that immediately grabbed his attention - it was the surreal calmness with which he handled himself. "It's composure that sees (Southward)

"It's composure the sets (Southward) apart from other players," Daluiso said. "He has a presence on the field and doesn't rush himself - and he knows himself - and he knows what to do with the ball." What to do with the ball. Southward does most often with the ball is score goals. As a sophomore, he scored 11 on the way to helping Wood River earn a Class A-2 state soccer champi in. I usually like pressure, but that was a little too much."

After last year's scoring explosion, Southward stands just two goals away from the Wood River. High School scoring record of 36 goals in a career, and looks to erase the mark sometime within the first few games of this season.
"I didn't know about the record until this year," Southward said. "But it is definitely a goal of mine to get it." Beyond his nose for the net, Southward may be best known for the red shoes he wears on the field. But for all his flash and reputation as a showboat and frespirit, Daluiso is quick to point out that Southward has never missed a practice. He even coaches youth soccer in the summer. "He has really grown up this year," Daluiso said. "He is showing the younger guys on the team the

"He nas really grown up this year," Daluiso said. "He is showing the younger guys on the team the ropes and is embracing his role as a senior. Sometimes what he wants to do and what I want him to do are different, but that's happening less and less. So far in practice, he is leading by example."

And with such a young team, ne Wolverines may look for outhward to contribute in different ways.

In practice he will be expected to do more than just dribble the ball through the freshmeh and score goals, Daluiso said. His attitude will be an integral part of creating the team unity necessary to win a third state crown.

The Minico High boys' team looked to be a postseason Cinderella at districts last fall, crafting an early 1-0 lead over Burley. But Burley tied thematch even, then won in a shoot-out. This season, short eight 1999 starters, it's a clean slate for the Spartans.

7. Senior city

it now, but it may be gone tomorrow.

The accident has prompted Kuka to take a fresh look at his coaching philosophy.

"This has been a great hardship on the school as well as on the community," Kuka said. "The accident has redefined my focus of building a team. A team needs to go beyond what happens on the field."

Winning isn't everything.

Winning isn't everything.

"We are going to move away from the winat-all-costs attitude, and concentrate more on knowing who is on the team when students see each other in the hallways," Kuka said. "I really want our freshmen to learn to just love the game. Athletics and sports are important in school, but they aren't the only thing."

"We were ready last year, we just fell short," the Liberty captain sald after-New-York beat Cleveland in the Eastern Conference finals. "Hopefully we'll take advantage of the opportunity to play against such a great basket-ball team. But, we're not just in it to play, we want to win." The Comets (31-5) knocked off regular-season champion Los Angeles in the West finals and will travel to Madison Square Garden, where the Liberty (24-13) have won 13 straight, for Thursday's opening game. Game 2 and then Game 3, if necessary, will be played in Houston this weekend. "That's the happiest I've seen us in the locker room since I've been here," Comets conch Van Chancellor said of the celebration in Los Angeles. Blue chips close up; tech stocks mixed

NEW YORK (AP) – Blue chip stocks rose Tuesday after the Federal Reserve kept interest rates unchanged, indicating inflation fears are moderating. Technology stocks were mixed, with computer shares up and telecommunications issues down, pardy on worries of slowing corporate profits.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 59.34 at 11,139.15.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 5.06 at 3,958.21 and the Standard & Poor's 500 index slipped 1.35 at 1,981.13.

Market watchers had expected the Fed to leave rates steady as a stream of economic data in recent weeks suggested the economy was slowing and inflation was under control. The Fed had ruised rates six times since last summer in an

Not much by dot-com standards, but where are they when you need them?

It is quite a turnaround from last year, when bonds and bond funds got clobbered as interest rates rose. That's because interest rates for a bond rises. And vice versa.

"We have this netherworld of people who don't have full

He said Congress has refused to reform the system because immigration policy is fraught with emotion and involves too many vested interests. Two of three H-IB bills pending in Congress provide some relief for workers awaiting green cards. The bills allow H-IB visas to be extended until the green card applications are, processed. Rep.
Lamar Smidt, a Republican from San Antonio, has introduced his own bill to reform the system, but It stresses training for U.S. workers over relaxing immigration rules. "H-1B visas for foreign workers are temporary," he said in a written statement in response to questions. "They were created to fill short-term labor shortages, and then the foreign workers would go home."

Other lawmakers say the green card mess isn't so much a problem of immigration policy as it is a bureaucratic failure.

"We have done nothing but increase the funding for INS over the period of several years," said Larry Neal, a spokesman for U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, Republican from Texas. "If they have chosen not to make this a priority, that explains a lot."
INS officials strongly disagreed with Neal's assessment.

'Hydriotaphia' means interment in a burial urn

The name for interment in an urn is "hydriotaphia." Some people look for truth, some for money, some for fame. But that specialist on such weighty matters, Dr. Theodore I. Rubin, says what's most intensively-sought worldwide by the most people as you might.

Songwriter reunites with missing banjo

ROSENDALE, N.Y. (AP) - Pete Seeger can strum again: His 55-year-old banjo, which disappeared earlier this month, has been found. Gary Schneeweiss Jr. was driving home from visting his father when he noticed the green banjo case beside the road on Aug. 8, the same day it was reported missing, according to Rosendale police.

On the case was Seeger's name and a phone number.

On the case was Seeger's name and a phone number.
Schneeweiss, 31, returned the banjo to the Seegers on Monday afternoon when he met the couple at a bookstore in Poughkeepsie. The Seegers gave the self-employed painter a S500 reward.
Schneeweiss, who did not know the folkelegend status of the banjo owner, said he didn't expect a reward and just wanted to return the instrument to "whoever Peter was."

"I saw Pete Seeger's name on the case, but it was just another name to me," he said. "It's all a shock to me. I still don't really know who he is."

he is."
The long-neck banjo was made by Seeger in 1945 and can be heard on such recordings as "Where Have All the Flowers Gone."
Seeger, a longtime activist, had said the instrument was believed stolen from his car

Pete Seeger, shown in this 1998 photo, got his treasured banjo back after he lost it earlier this during a trip to a political rally in Rosendale. But his wife said it was possible her husband left the banjo on top of his car and drove off, sending the instrument tumbling to the road-side.

The missing banjo had generated international intrigue and even a hoax appearance on an Internet auction site.

"Everyone has been calling us saying that they've seen the banjo all over the place," Rosendale Police Chief Jim Rowe said. "The only thing that irritates us is that it was found the day it was lost."

Seeger, 81, started his career 62 years ago. In 1940, he formed the Almannac singers, which another folk icon, Woody Guthrie, joined a year later. He reached commercial success in the 1950s with the group the Weavers.

Besides "Where Have All the Flowers

Weavers.

Besides "Where Have All the Flowers
Gone," Seeger wrote or co-wrote "II 1 Had a Hammer," "Turn, Turn," and "Kisses Sweeter Than Wine."

He was credited with popularizing "We Shall Overcome," which he printed in his publication "People's Song," in 1948. He platesaid his only contribution to the anthem of the civil rights moument was changing the seccivil rights movement was changing the second word from "will" to "shall," which he said "opens up the mouth better."

Aunt welcomes family, but not all their friends

DEAR ABBY: I am a single woman (no children) who hosts several family parties during the year. I have six brothers and sisters. All are married, and they have a total of 16 children. Everyone in the family is invited to these family get-togethers and I used to looking forward to seeing them. The problem is, my brother's five children each bring a boyfriend or girlfriend. I never know when these "extra five" people are coming, and it makes planning a party difficult. (If all the nieces and nephews started bringing their friends, there would be 32 children!) My brother never tells me that their kids' friends are coming—and when they do come, they socialize only with each other. When I was a teen-ager, if we did not want to attend a family gathering, we stayed home; we did not invite our friends. Isn't it inconsiderate to bring uninvited guests to someone's home? My mother tells.me.not.to.say.any.

ABBY Abigail VanBuren thing, just to be happy we all get together and get along. My feel-ing is if others approve of uninvir-ed guests at their parties, that is their decision. I believe it is my DEAR IRRITATED: There's nothing old-fashioned about good manners. Inform your siblings you would prefer that your parties be "family only" - then relax the rule once a year and make it an open house where everyone is invited.

You are fortunate to have a large loving family. Not everyone

DEAR ABBY: I am trying to find out what "business casual" means. The dress code for men has just changed in my office, and ties and suits are now optional. Most wear dress shirts and khaki pants. Some men are sporting necklaces. Where do you draw the line?

FASHION CONTREP

- FASHION-CONFUSED IN LA.

DEAR FASHION-CONFUSED:
You've asked an intelligent question. Everyone would be better served if some guidelines were issued. The problem lies in the hesitance of many employers to issue a specific dress code, which has left many people confused.
What is or is not acceptable attire is a line that must be drawn by the employers.
Whether employees wear a suit and tie, slacks and a sport coat, or khakis and a casual shirt, attire in the workplace should always look neat and professional. While some employers feel that casual dress improves productivity, I have received mail from readers telling me just the opposite.

DEAR ABBY: My brother has asked me to be his best man. The problem is, I am not a man - I am a girl. I am honored to have been asked, but I don't know what to asket, our s war.

I don't want to wear what the bridesmaids are wearing because I will look like I walked the wrong way or something. Are there tuxedos for women?

-STUCK IN FRANKLIN, TENN.

DEAR STUCK: Yes, there are elegant tuxedos for women - some with pants and some with skirts. If the wedding isn't formal, a simple, elegant dinner suit would also be appropriate. Ask your brother and future sister-in-law which they would prefer.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"A hero is a man who does what

— Romain Rolland

"You saved the match," exclaimed a joyful South. "I misplayed the game and went set. I. $\\ \text{Q J 10} \\ \text{Q 3 L0} \\ \text{Not quite," corrected his West teammate. "At our table, my partner teased declarer to his demise."

ner teased declarer to his demise."
At the first table, South took West's heart queen and led a low spade to dummy's 10. Had the 10 held, South planned to finesse twice in clubs. With the honors split, he would have scored 10 tests.
Unfortunately, dummy's spade—10 lost to East's queen, and East returned a heart. South ducked to West's 10, but West exited safely in spades. Now South could take only one club finesse, annaging only eight winners.
"I should have led my spade jack," confessed a repentant South. "When it loses, I will have two spade entries for two club finesses."
"Not so fast," repilled his team-"Not so fast," repilled his team-

"Not so fast," replied his teammate West. "That's what South did at our table. And he still went down!"

did at our table. And he still went down!"

Why did this South fail? East made the excellent play of refusing to win South's spade jack, and South carelessly took the bait. He led another spade to dummy's 10, and Bast took his queen. This brought South back to square one and also lost him his game.

How does South cinch the game after East's brilliant duck in spad'es? He settles on two club winners instead of three, and he leads clubs from his hand to guarantee two winners — just enough to cinch his game.
